Administrative / Biographical history IUIH is a regional not-for-profit Aboriginal Community Controlled Health Service (CCHS) that leads the planning, development and delivery of health and family wellbeing services and employment pathways to the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander population of South East Queensland. IUIH empowers Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander families to take responsibility for their health and wellbeing, in particular through Deadly Choices, IUIH's flagship preventative health program, operating across South East Queensland and under license across Queensland and Australia. The Deadly Choices shirts and merchandise are offered free as incentives to encourage a preventative approach to their health, linked to simple procedures, such as preventative health checks, screening, or immunisation.
