Administrative / Biographical history Robert Logan Jack (1845-1921) was born in Ayrshire, Scotland. He was educated at the Irvine Academy and at the University of Edinburgh, joined the Geological Survey of Scotland in 1867 and by 1876 had contributed greatly to Scottish geology by mapping the coalfields. In 1877 he married Janet Simpson, nee Love, they had one son, Robert Lockhart Jack (1878-1964). Janet Simpson had one son and two daughters from a previous marriage. In 1876 Jack was appointed geological surveyor for Northern Queensland and arrived at Townville in 1877. In 1879 he became the second Queensland Government Geologist for the colony. Jack resigned his Queensland government post in 1899 to explore the metalliferous deposits in the Szechuan Province of China for an English company.
