Abstract Collection of interviews regarding the Surat Aboriginal Family

Scope and content Oral histories relating to residents of the Surat Fringe Camp (or Camps) near to the South-Western Queensland town of Surat. The Aboriginal camps consisting of humpies and tents sat along the Balonne River outside of town, segregated from the main Surat township. The Combarngo, Mann and Hazzard families, part of the Mandandanji people who are the Traditional Owners of the land all around Surat, lived on the north side of the river. Other families, including the Mundy and Cleven families, lived on the south side. Following changes brought about by the 1967 referendum the camp families were able to relocate to town.
